No Trace Of Girl Who Disappeared With Money

Downhearted and weary from their travels over the country, John Mayirnik and young son returned late last night from Pittsburgh, where they had spent the day in search of Anna Mayirnik, the 16 year old girl who mysteriously disappeared from her home Monday afternoon. Their trip was in vain and despite the fact that all police stations in the city and many other places were visited by the anxious father and son, no trace of the girl was found. When they returned home last evening and reported that the daughter was still missing, Mrs. Mayirnik, a frail little woman, and the mother of seven children almost collapsed and with tears streaming down her face, she lay awake almost the entire night crying for the return of her little girl, who being the oldest of the family, had always assisted with the housework and was considered a good girl.

It developed that before leaving Monday, the daughter ransacked the house and took with her $125, the savings of her father, who is a hard worker in the local mills. When he appeared at the Independent office this morning, he was of the opinion that the girl had left home for good, as she took her best clothes and money enough to meet expenses for some time. Her home life he stated, was of the very best and up until a month ago, she was never out with either men or girls, although she attended the moving picture shows many evenings.

About a month ago the father claims she got in company with some older girls and he thinks that they probably put the idea of running away from home in her head. He does not know of any boy friends with whom she was ever seen, but stated that since she has not only only left her home, but stole the savings of the little family, he is ready to believe anything. Mrs. Mayirnik, with a mother's love is ready and willing to forgive anything if her daughter only returns home, and she is sure that older heads are responsible for the sudden disappearance of the girl.

Disorderly Defendants Are Fined

Quite a complication of affairs has arisen over a case before Justice of the Peace Watkins yesterday afternoon, in which Jacob Peters, Sr., caused the arrest of Hugo Stollmire on a charge of trespassing and his son Jacob Peters, Jr., for disorderly conduct. Mr. Peters it is claimed, owns a farm between Smithton and West Newton and has placed numerous trespass signs warning the public to stay off his grounds. Despite these warnings, Stollmire was caught on the grounds and his arrest followed. Jacob Peters, Jr., got into an altercation with his father over the affair and he too, was arrested and at the hearing yesterday was fined $10, while Stollmire was let off with a $3.00 fine.

Following the hearing, the man became disorderly outside the squire's office and attempted to argue that the Justice was wrong in his decision and that Stollmire should not be fined. They caused so much disorder that the police were summoned and Jacob Peters, Jr. and William Herbert were placed under arrest. At the hearing this morning both men were fined $7.00 and costs amounting to $9.00.

It also developed that two members of the police force, Officer Woods and Foster were at the hearing at the squire's office and added to the disorder outside the office by offering legal advice against the squire's decision. Acting Burgess Dale was of the opinion that the officers were going out of their bounds as police officers and instructed Chief of Police Wheatley not to allow them to go to work when they reported this evening.

Pioneer Resident Died Yesterday

Andrew Sampson, aged 47, a pioneer resident of this city, died Tuesday evening at 7:15 in the West Penn hospital, South Side, Pittsburgh, following a four weeks' illness caused by a complication of diseases. The deceased resided at 1018 Highland avenue and was employed at the Pittsburgh Steel. He has been a resident of this city for 13 years About a month ago he took ill and was sent to the hospital two weeks ago. He is survived by two daughters, Bertha and Elizabeth, his wife having died about four years ago. Arrangements have not been completed for the funeral, but interment will be made in the Braddock cemetery. Mr. Sampson was a member of the S. B. & A. lodge.

Water Rebate

Most of the 10,000 consumers of city water, in New Castle, will receive a rebate of one half their water bills for the quarter ending March 31, 1913. Such action on the part of the city of the New Castle Water company is the result of the decision of the Supreme Court upholding the injunction of Judge W. E. Porter of the Lawrence County court, which kept the water company from collecting rental for water supplied for a period of six weeks previous to March 31, 1913. The water during that period was unfit for domestic use and the city and citizens of the city secured an injunction. The refund will amount to more than $15,000.

Fighters Matched

Packey McFarland and Mike Gribbon who signed last week for a bout at Brighton Beach for Sept. 11 should furnish the best bout of the season. The boys have never met, and they are both clever. Although the distance is only ten rounds, this ought to be enough to reach a decision. The boys are both 27 years old and their ring experience matches up pretty evenly.

—Mr. and Mrs. J. S. McKenzie and family have returned from an extended visit with friends and relatives at Columbus and Buffalo.

New Firm To Locate In Town

The Velvet Ice Cream company, one of the largest and most up-to-date establishments of its kind in Western Pennsylvania, has established a storage room at 484 Schoonmaker avenue and will make this their distributing point for the upper Monongahela valley.

The company is located at Monongahela with a $75,000 plant with the most sanitary improvements. They have a capacity of 1,000 gallons of ice cream and 20 tons of ice per day and the manufacture of the ice cream is under the supervision of an expert in this line from Chicago. R. S Blake, an experienced manager will be in charge of the business end of the establishment and a man will be placed in charge of the local room. Their telephone number is 444 and all wholesale orders will be promptly attended to.

The company not only delivers all ice cream by auto truck, but sends a man around each morning with fresh ice to pack with and will take the best cars of their customers. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to visit their plant at Monongahela and to secure a sample of the ice cream which has been righftully named Velvet.

A Losing Game

Old Jupe Pluvius has played a serious part in baseball this year. Now comes the wail of Decatur in the Three-Eye League, which club lost its grand-stand in a tornado and has a shrinkage of the wallet by the constant interferance by the rain.

—The Bible classes of the Christ Lutheran church will hold a lawn fete beside the church at 221 McKee avenue this evening. In case of rain the tables will be moved to the basement of the church, where lunch will be served. 1t fp

Serious Charge Preferred Against Local Young Men

Richard Welch and Tom McGee two local young men arrested on a charge of larceny, will have a more serious charge to face when their hearing is called before Justice of the Peace Watkins. Anna Wilkinson, the young girl who charged them with snatching her pocketbook while she was walking on the Monessen-Charleroi bridge, appeared before the squire yesterday and after telling a pitiful story of her treatment at the hands of the young men, an additional charge of sodomy was entered against both.

The girl is employed in a restaurant in Charleroi and said she was on her way home when Magee and Welch accosted her and after assaulting her, took a pocketbook containing about $8.00. She came to this city and preferred charges against both the men and shortly afterwards Welch was placed under arrest. The police were also notified to arrest Magee, but he came to the police station this morning and gave himself up.

Both young men have been in police court before and Welch has served a term in the county jail. The girl claims before the men assaulted her, she was held to the ground and her teeth knocked out. The charge brought against them is of a serious nature, and if they are found guilty, both face a lengthy term in jail.

Successful Outing

A happy lot of children were brought back from the Sheetz farm in automobiles last evening, after having spent the day in the woods as the guest of local people, this being the first annual outing for the poor children of the town. With nearly 300 children in attendance, the twenty ladies were kept busy during the day, but not one accident was reported and all report a good time with plenty to eat. Everybody assisted in making the affair a success and it is hoped that the outing will be an annual event. A program of sports was a feature of the afternoon.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache.

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

After stooping it was hard to regain an erect position and often the pains almost took one's breath away. Headaches were most constant and black spots floated before the eyes. A number of medicines failed to bring help and Doan's Kidney Pills were finally procured at the Hirsch Drug Co. The first box brought relief and three boxes made a cure."

A Philanthropist Spoiled

By SADIE OLCOTT

Miss Margaret Lawrence was an elderly maiden lady who, having pined for a mission, finally decided to take one upon herself. She selected the amelioration of the criminal classes She visited them in prison, and many of them talked with her so persuasively about the unfortunate circumstances that had led them to become criminals that she came to believe they were all victims of their surroundings. This led her to advocate mercy toward them.

Miss Lawrence, who was wealthy, founded a society for helping criminals to lead a better life. Her society was really a corps of young women who were proud to be her assistants They worked with her in the cause and though during a term of years they succeeded in lifting only a very few criminals up into a better sphere permanently, they persevered.

One of Miss Lawrence's objects was to induce persons against whom crimes had been committed to refrain from prosecution and to take the offender under their protection with a view to accomplishing his reformation She found this a difficult matter. When one had been victimized by a confidence man he was usually bent rather on punishment than sympathy When a woman lost her jewelry at the hands of a dishonest servant she considered it her duty to the state to prosecute the thief Miss Lawrence spent much of her time in endeavoring to induce such persons to forego revenge and help bring about a new birth in those who had injured them.

Whenever Miss Lawrence saw an account in a newspaper of a theft or a robbery she would go or send one of her assistants to the injured person to induce him or her to be merciful. One day, hearing that an elderly butler had been caught purloining his employer's valuables she went to the jail, saw the thief, who had been arrested, and found him to be a man of fifty, of good appearance and, according to his account, the victim of unfortunate circumstances His name was Homer Hawkins. When asked how he came by the name of Homer he said that his father had been a pedagogue and an admirer of the great poet. Homer Hawkins wept bitter tears over the condition in which he found himself and so worked on Miss Lawrence's feelings that she went to his late master, secured a promise that he would not prosecute the case and took Mr Hawkins under her own especial care for the purpose of giving him an opportunity to show how cruel fate had been to him

Hawkins was made major domo of Miss Lawrence's household. He seemed too respectable to be called butler or to perform the menial services of a butler The truth is he did very little of anything, because Miss Lawrence had nothing for so respectable a person to do. He attended to the purchase of household supplies, and since his mistress paid cash for everything she bought her major domo was intrusted with the funds used for the purpose.

Never was a man more particular in rendering his accounts If from the multitude of payments at any one time he was at a loss to account for a dime or a nickel he was so much troubled that his mistress sometimes expected that he would burst into tears On such occasions she assured him that so trifling an amount was of no consequence, but in vain He would mourn over the fact that after the unfortunate condition in which she had found him she would surely think him dishonest. He refused to be comforted.

One day Hawkins went out to do the morning's marketing. He did not return at the usual time and in the meanwhile a lady called on Miss Lawrence and she sought her kind offices in the matter of a criminal who had robbed her. The lady was willing to forgive the culprit, but asked Miss Lawrence to undertake his reform. The ladies' car was at the door, and she begged Miss Lawrence to go with her to a police station to see the prisoner. Miss Lawrence consented and on the way the lady told her that the criminal had called on one of her maids the evening before and had gone away with some valuable silver. He had been arrested in the morning.

When Miss Lawrence reached the jail, and the culprit was marched out of his cell the good lady was astonished. He was Homer Hawkins. His benefactress was at a loss what to do in the matter, but, turning to the lady who had suffered, was about to plead for the prisoner, when an inspector showed her a number of articles belonging to her that had been found in Hawkins' possession.

There was a difference in Miss Lawrence's neighbors losing valuables and losing them herself. She turned upon Hawkins, called him an ungrateful man, and then, after promising the inspector that she would appear against the prisoner, walked out of the office the picture of indignation.

This ended Miss Lawrence's individual work in the reformation of criminals. She disbanded her society, but in time joined one in which the work carried on was rather general than particular. Even this organized effort met with a very limited success. Nevertheless Miss Lawrence found that while particular reformations were not achieved, the condition of the criminal classes was bettered by the efforts of the society.

Third "The Advisor," Universal Film Co. productions. Fourth the wonderful serial and favorite of America, "The Romance of Elaine." the concluding chapters of "The Exploits of Elaine,"—"The Lost Torpedo" featuring Lionel Barymore, Pearl White and Creighton. jutting out into the Atlantic, a fisherman, concealed behind a rock, sees the periscope of a submarine rise sees a man's head and shoulders rise seemingly out of the sea, and sees a pair of athletic arms strike out bravely for the shore.

That night, at a hotel in New York, a distinguished looking foreigner, much resembling the man who seemed to rise up out of the sea, is shadowed by a fussy old gentleman resembling the fisherman of the boat scene. The foreigner goes out, and the fussy old gentlemtn goes to his room, where after a short, sharp struggle with a valet, he searches through all drawers and papers. One paper he pockets with glee and then departs. Elaine and Jameson are visited by the distinguished looking foreigner who tells them he is a secret service agent from Washington and begs to get information with regard to Kennedy and the lost torpedo. Elaine's dog, digging with its forepaws in a pot of palms, unearths the lost torpedo and carries it up to the attic where he drops it behind a trunk. The torpedo's propeller, however, has been left in the palm pot, where Marcius Del Mar, the foreigner finds it. Elaine is suspected by him of having concealed the torpedo. The fussy old gentleman in Del Mar's tracks since he left his rooms is an interested spectator. He is unaware that Del Mar has spies guarding the house, and is set upon by them. Rushing madly into the conservatory, he faces Del Mar. Both draw their guns, but the fussy old gentleman fires first. His gun is loaded with bullets containing asphyxiating gas. Both Del Mar and Elaine fall suffocated to the floor. How the fussy old gentleman escapes is a fitting climax to this most thrilling episode, and will cause you to wonder who he is. You will see more of him in the next episode called "The Gray Friar." Watch for it.

The story of the "The Heart of a Painted Woman" which will be exhibited in our theatre Friday, August 13 is as follows:

Selma, daughter of poor parents, leaves her home in Pennsylvania, to go to New York and take up her career as a singer. Unsuccessful she abandons singing and secures a position as model in the studio of a rich artist. After a few sittings, model and master become infatuated and before the first painting is finished, Selma succumbs to his wiles and becomes his paramour.

Later Selma is abandoned and the artist becomes the husband of a prominent heiress. Desperate and discouraged, Selma sinks lower and lower in the human scale and at an entertainment she meets Young Spendthrift. Enthusiastic over Selma's rare beauty, her latest admirer suggests a game of cards, the stakes to be Selma herself. The winner to accompany her to her home. Disgusted at the affair, Selma flees, but is followed by Young Spendthrift, the winner. Spendthrift offers Selma large sums of money—but to no avail. Selma lectures Spendthrift and tells him that if she had his opportunities in life, she would have accomplished things, instead of being the "sort of woman she was."

Struck with an inspiration, Spendthrift decides to give her a chance, and presents her with one hundred thousand dollars. Later Wealth, father-in-law of Selma's former lover, covets the fortune of Spendthrift, and uses the artist to bring about his ruin. By means of underhand methods, Wealth gains his end. Spendthrift is ruined. Selma in the meantime, has devoted her money and time to creating a hospital for the care of abandoned children. Visiting among the poor families takes much of her time.

Spendthrift, learning that the artist was responsible for his downfall, as well as Selma's, plots revenge, and with this end in view invites all his friends to see him bury his past life. Artist comes to the affair with Spendthrift, becomes intoxicated and at the end the two lie down to sleep off the stupor.

Wealth then appears, tirades against Artist's actions and the treatment by him, of his. Wealth's daughter—while Spendthrift, in the throes of a drug passions—See the rest of this magnificient allegory in "The Heart of a Painted Woman."

Sporting Notes

The oarsmen are all looking to the Springfield regatta, the big national rowing event, to settle the superiority between Canadian and United States amateurs. The two oarsmen picked as the serious contenders in the single sculls are Robert Dibble of Toronto and John B. Kelly of Philadelphia. Dibble is the present champion, but Kelly has been rapidly forging to the front, and rules the favorite in his home town. Should Dibble again win, he will tie the record made by Frank Greer of Boston, who won the race three years in succession.

Leach Cross is going back to dentistry. He is practically through with the boxing game, having stored away considerable shekels and won a creditable number of ring battles. Leach never did believe in waiting until h was a has-been before quitting. Hereafter he will put the punch into aching molars. In real life he is Dr. Louis C. Wallach, and he already has an established dental business in New York.

While millionaires never set the world afire in sport, there is one member of the tribe who is still bowling over championships with regularity. He is George Meyers Church of Princeton, who won the Northwest Tennis title a few weeks ago. Given a col million at his birth, offered three more millions at 16 to change his name, and finally inheriting twenty millions at 20, is the pleasant experience of this hero of the tennis courts. Church wears no airs of the "idle rich." He has just finished his course at Princeton, and says he will tackle the affairs of life as he has tennis.

After basking in the baseball limelight for a quarter of a century, the Delehantys have passed from the major leagues. There were five of the Delchantys, all brothers and they trained on the sand lots at Cleveland. Everyone of them found their way to fame in the baseball world. Ed was the first to get into fast company. He met a tragic death by falling from a bridge. Tom came second, then followed Joe, who was with St. Louis for a number of years. Jim was the fourth to shine in the leagues. He starred with the Detroit Tigers for years, and was one of the greatest of infielders. He jumped to the Federals last year, and was recently released to the minors. Frank was the fifth member of the Delehantys. He played with Cleveland and later with the New York Americans.
